Mary Maranville

SEEAG | Founder, President and CEO

Mary Maranville is the daughter of a dairy farmworker from upstate NY. His hard work and commitment to farming inspired her to found SEEAG in 2008, whose mission is to educate thousands of schoolchildren annually about the importance of local farmland and food literacy. It was not part of her school's curriculum to educate her and her classmates to appreciate farmland and our agricultural workforce, who ensured we had food on our tables daily. It is the same today; many schools' formal curricula do not include agricultural and food literacy.

Growing up on a dairy farm in upstate NY led to Mary Maranville founding Students for Eco-Education and Agriculture (SEEAG) in 2008. It's celebrating its 16th anniversary in 2024 and 11th anniversary as a 501(c)3. Through field trips and in-class learning, SEEAG educates school children about the farm origins of their food and to appreciate growers, farmworkers, farmland, and the food on our tables. SEEAG programs are locally relevant and give a realistic portrayal of agriculture. Through its programs, SEEAG is creating young agricultural ambassadors and future stewards of our local farmland.

For the first time, SEEAG is poised to attain close to $1 million in revenue this fiscal year, which is a testament to the community's generosity and the importance of its mission.

Since its beginning, SEEAG has reached over 125,000 elementary school students in Santa Barbara and Ventura Counties, California. This 2023 – 2024 school year, SEEAG will educate more than 10,600 students, including over 3,000 students who will attend 70 field trips to SEEAG's two Farm Labs in Saticoy and Santa Maria. Many of these students are considered low-income Title I students.

Under Mary's guidance, SEEAG's Child Wellness Initiative was developed using agriculture to inspire and empower children to make healthy daily eating and exercise decisions. SEEAG's STEM Career Pathways in Agriculture is for middle and high schoolers and introduces them to agriculture industry STEM career opportunities. Mary's work with children and their parents led to Mary founding Ventura County Farm Day and Santa Barbara County Farm Day. Each attracts over 6,000 attendees of all ages annually to local farms where visitors can see and learn about the food chain from farm to table. All SEEAG programs, including both Farm Days, are free.

Her newest achievement is founding Heritage Farmland Touring Co., which will benefit SEEAG.
